FRIDAY, JULY 22, 1863.

The Sagacity of British Statesmen.

We ask for no better proof that the spirit of prophecy does not abide in the world, than the recent dispatches of Lord Russell. It used to be the fashion to tell the sagacity of British statesmen, was thought they could see so far ahead to be able to provide for the exigencies of an almost indefinite future, nor is going too far to say, that as a body, they were enamored of their own astuteness. For a long time they had been friendly to us, so that nobody was particularly surprised at the feeling they manifested when the rebellion began. In time, or rather with undue haste, came the Queen's Proclamation, the accordance of belligerent rights to the sapegrace cruisers of the stars and bars, and as a natural result the semi-recognition of the proposed nationality. We cannot believe that Victoria issued that proclamation under the promptings of her own heart alone. Leading men in England wished to witness our entire discomfiture, through jealousy of our increasing power. They thought they saw the hour of our doom, and in order to keep up their reputation for sagacity boldly announced the utter impossibility of putting down the rebellion. The press assumed the same oracular tone, and books were published with the same object in view. The Queen yielded, and it is not wonderful that she did, for no sovereign wishes to be behind the statesmen whose business it is to counsel and advise. The moral strength given to the rebellion by the course of English Government cannot be calculated in dollars and cents. The Queen, having given his half-way sanction to the enterprise, might naturally be expected to do more, and in a favorable moment, to grant an unequivocal and full acknowledgement. The rebels were interested in the supposed sagacity of their British friends, or its complete vindication would have been their salvation. But after a while the stubborn truth became manifest. Russell, Palmerston & Co., saw that their reputation was in danger, and what is more, the people saw it too. This could have been a capital opportunity for the pungent satire of Punch, but Punch is sufficiently English to avoid falling with the national will. It became painfully apparent in England that profound statesmen were profoundly ignorant upon American affairs, that the press was sadly in fault in its vindications, and that the authors of the books who set out to depict the final struggles of the dissolving republic, had written themselves dunces forever. But the most unenviable fact still remained, and that was the duty of publicly acknowledging the failure of the rebel cause. It afforded an opportunity to indulge in acrimonious reflections, but to Russell's credit be it said, the instructions given to the diplomats are reserved and dignified. Our government has been officially informed of the withdrawal of belligerent rights, but the rebellion would have been over long ago had those rights ever been accorded. The moral of all this is, that those who cannot see beyond their noses ought not to affect to be wise, and more especially should they avoid the habit of trying to foretell what shall happen while they are grossly ignorant of the things that are.

True Fame.

In one of his letters to a friend, Pliny the Consul makes this remark. "France should be the result of our actions and not the cause of them." There is a wide discrimination in this observation. It makes a great deal of difference how a man starts in life and how he conducts himself when started, as to whether he shall fail or succeed in what he attempts to do. Many a youthful writer has set out with the notion that he would become famous in consequence of his assumed genius, and has never been heard of beyond the narrow limits of his little town. And in like manner, thousands of ambitious youths have determined to take no step in life except it would lead to political distinction, a condition to which they never attained in the end, thus paying the penalty of obscurity for their absurd pretensions. A thoroughly ambitious man is a dangerous man, because if he finds it convenient to dispense with principle in order to reach his ends, away goes his morality like a puff of wind, and he drives under bare poles to sea shore. Such an one works with tireless energy and sees nothing but the selfish purpose he has in view, and when he fails or makes shipwreck he is visited with the legitimate results of his own folly. "Act well your part, there all the honor lies." Contrast Napoleon I and Washington. They were both of humble origin, both lived in ages of stirring events and both became famous, but how different that was! Napoleon struggled for civil power and military renown and was unscrupulous as to the means of obtaining what he wanted. Washington moderated his desires, performed his duty from a sense of duty, and exhibited no selfish traits of character. The former courted fame more earnestly than a lover ever wooed a mistress; to the latter fame came and crowned him with her laurels. Men admire the genius and the indomitable will of Napoleon, but they revere the virtues and the self-denial of Washington. This is the judgment of the thinking world, and it is right. With these examples in view, would it not be well to incite the young to the performance of good deeds as a matter of duty, rather than to force them by evil counsels and injudicious appeals to a splendid career in the state or upon the field; to a course of life which in most cases will end disastrously to themselves and to society? This caution is called for now, because our country is about entering upon a new life and will need new men to manage her affairs. In thirty or forty years we shall see the fruit of the plants we are raising. Teach the young in public and in private how to govern themselves, to check their impulses and to restrain the wastefulness, encourage a veneration for the aged, a love of truth, sobriety and industry, and then when they compose the next generation, if there shall not be many meteors shooting through the sky, that sky will be lighted by the steady radiance of the fixed stars. It is fearful to think of a dissolute generation taking possession of the coming era, a era full of possibilities for good, so auspicious for the liberty of men, so ready to adorn with imperishable crowns the brows of noble men.

VOLUNTARY Correspondence from all parts of the Oil Regions, more especially that relating to the discovery and production of Oil, and the development of Oil Lands, is respectfully solicited. We want facts, brief and to the point, but no anonymous communications.

The Court of Oyer and Terminer for Crawford County will be held at Meadville August 7th during one week.

The daily product of oil at Titusville is now estimated at 2,700 barrels.

Euros the subsidies of the hot spell and the occurrence of chilly nights, a Patisson exchange has been agitating the project of building park.

The following epigraph appears in a cemetery at Meadville. "He lies the body of John Wild and Ruth, his wife, and not in the Earth he fare is accomplished."

The Huldtoper Park at Meadville, has been awarded to the authority of that place as a free gift, conditioned only upon its enclosure and suitable improvement.

The Sixteenth Annual Fair of the Ohio State Board of Agriculture will be held one mile south of the State House, in the city of Columbus commencing on Tuesday, September 17th and ending on Friday afternoon September 19th.

RACES AT THE DRIVING PARK.—The time is to be lively competition at the Driving Park this afternoon between the celebrated running horses, Wild Bill, Punch, American Star, Fly Douglas and various others. Bets will be taken for the running horses. Races to commence at 2 o'clock P.M.

The Pittsburgh Commercial says—“The Keir Farm Oil Company, near Titusville, have struck the third sand rock at a depth of 1330 feet, and have a splendid show of oil.” This will be news to some people hereabout. “To the hundred and forty feet ought to bring something besides a ‘show’”

The Game Show Next Week.—Our reader will do well to be in mind that Saturday next week is the day upon which the annual exhibition of Van Amburgh & Co. is to exhibit at this place. It is much the largest show traveling.

ANOTHER PHANTOM MEET.—The Sun Iron Company have commenced the development of their territory, which comprises the Lake farm, lying on the main traveled road between Plumer and Pittsfield, and a quarter mile from Pittsfield City. A hotel is to be immediately built, a grocer is already started, and the indications are that another “city” will be erected there “in a few days.”

First of August.—The honored citizen of Titusville, proposed to celebrate the first of August, by a picnic, supper and ball. The committee of arrangements consists of John G. Brown, Simon Walker, Joseph Harris, and Stephen Curtis. Good spectacles have been secured for the occasion, and ample time to be found by the Titusville Quaintie Band.

One of the provisions of the recent law, as amended by the 1st Congress, is that no person shall be licensed to practice without proof of enrollment. Now that the war is at an end, the enforcement of this requirement is deemed unnecessary, and the Committee of Internal Revenue has notified the state to receive all applications for peddlars. Because without any proof of enrollment or draft, as a consequence peddlers will be as plenty as blackberries in a month or so.

It is estimated that three fourths of the postal currency is counterfeit, and with almost every body recognizes the fact, it seems impossible to do business without risking its circulation. The best counterfeit fifty cent currency is the best that has been put in circulation. It is said that some four or five thousand dollars in this money have been printed, but as the plates have fallen into the hands of the authorities, and the peddler operator in the business has been arrested, it is scarcely probable that any more of it will be issued.

Oil News.—A new well was tubed on Tuesday above the Morrison farm on Cherry Hill, and commenced pumping on Wednesday morning. The water was exhausted about 2 o'clock, and the oil began flowing at 5 o'clock, the full size of the pipe. The emission of gas and oil was so strong as to derange the tubing, and burst the seed bag.

The well struck by the Independent Oil company on Wilson Hill, a week ago, was tubed on Wednesday and commenced pumping. The yield was very good and continued intermittently during the day, sometimes flowing for a period of fifteen or twenty minutes at the rate of 300 barrels.

THE PROSPECTS IN ALLEGHENY COUNTY.—On Mahoning Creek, Armstrong county there is considerable activity. The well of E. J. Laughlin, at the mouth of Scrubgrass, is being worked over again, and with very flattering results. A Philadelphia company are at work further up the creek. A company is also working at Milton, and have met with favorable indications. The Clarion and Allegheny River Oil Company, at Lawrenceburg, have struck several veins of oil, and anticipate a large well soon. The reports from Miller's Folly, Gentry's Run, Buffalo and Crooked Creek are favorable.

1860.—This is the name of a town located on the right bank of the Allegheny river, within four miles of Franklin, and on the line of the A. & W. Railway. Some description of it will be found in our advertising columns. We infer it is one of those desirable points, the outgrowth of oil and trade, which are to become thirty and proprieate through a twelvemonth. The convergence of railroad and river, adds to its important commercial advantages, and the beauty of the site, the purity and abundance of water, and the provincial healthfulness of that section, are undoubtedly incentives to emigration and settlement. Messrs. Gladys A. Green, and James Jenkins, of Ionia and Mt. H. Culver, of New York, will furnish any information of the terms of sale of lots &c., at Reno.

THE CHAMPS EXHIBITION.—A TRAVELING HUMOR.—The editor of the Corry Telegraph has issued an extra in which he advertises the above show as a glaring imposture and humbug. The Telegraph says of the company:

But with all the pettifoggery they failed to convince the people of this locality that they act in good faith. The fact is that the “New York Champs” does not have no more than as a respectable and decent show in the devil itself as an angel, and if Justice led us to it would be drowned down by every community upon whom they attempt to pin on this humbug as a show worthy of public patronage, and the manager of the concern arrested and placed in close confinement for their impositions.

We know nothing about the above exhibition, but as we have some acquaintance with the Telegraph editor, and as we don't want to see people humbugged, we give the Champs Elysees the benefit of a free advertisement.

the performances very creditable, but there was no such result as there was to the circus which just preceded them. You do not know quite a crowd collected down on the Cherry Hill with a rope stretched from Martin & Silliman's building to the hill in the town, aross liberty street. The drama was of one hour duration. About half past twelve o'clock the expectant crowd were ready to witness the appearance of the players in the amphitheatre the flat neatly, crossing and recrossing after which he was rewarded by quite a fair collection taken up by himself. It was said on Wednesday night there was a disturbance at the show, but I can not learn that the report had any foundation in fact. A police force was on the ground at each performance and excellent order maintained.

I intended to refer in this letter to a subject of interest to mechanics and material men, in connection with oil well boring, but must defer it to my next.

A copious shower came need this evening and continued up to bed time. Look out for freshets in the creeks.
